

Keep an eye on your health – and savings.

Whether you wear eyeglasses, contact lenses or have perfect vision, preventive eye care is an important part of your overall health strategy. And a good Vision Insurance plan can help reduce the costs of exams, frames, lenses, and even laser correction surgery.

As we all are experiencing longer, healthier lives, the number of eye problems is expected to increase.

- Two out of three Americans are affected by vision problems¹
- 70% of adults in the U.S. experience some form of digital eye strain due to use of their electronic devices²
- Nearly 25% of school-age children have vision problems³

Regular Eye Exams Can Detect Major Medical Problems

Vision coverage isn't only for people who wear corrective lenses. Regular eye exams should be a part of your regular physical checkup as they can detect other, more substantial, medical issues such as:

- Diabetes
- High blood pressure
- Increased stroke risk
- Autoimmune diseases
- High blood pressure
- Excessive, thyroid hormones
